

End User License Agreements

---

Reese Hatfield

EULAs

---

- You very rarely own the software you use
- Put a lot of trust in some company
- Often times, companies will apply license agreements to use their software

EULAs

- You don't own your software
- Just signing a contract that says how you may be permitted to use it
- Legally binding
- Usually absurdly long

EULAs

- You almost never actually read these
- Crazy stuff to be found in here
- Waive a lot of privacy rights
- Niche clauses
- Evil

---

- Open Source Software (OSS)
- All software is just code
- Make the code available
- Public Licensure
  - MIT, Apache, etc
- Let's read some of them

Open Source

---

- Prevent exploitation
- Often more secure
  - Hundreds of people maintain this software
  - Anyone can really
- Harder to profit off of
  - More open licensure

Open Source

---

- Helps developer right software for the betterment of humanity
- Open Source tools
  - Usually require some more technical knowledge
  - But you can get there
- OSS is for the betterment of society
